Town Manager Screening Com. reviews applicants

By PAIGE IMPINK

paige@yourtowncrier.com

WILMINGTON — The search committee tasked with finding Wilmington's next town manager has started the process of reviewing applicants. Working with the consulting firm Community Paradigm Associates over the last two months, the committee contributed to a list of attributes and desirable qualities for the next town manager and helped create a marketing piece for prospective candidates.

Candidates for the position were recruited by CPA through municipal job posting channels and professional connections. Prospective candidates are sorted into categories by experience. According to CPA principal Bernie Lynch, some candidates may have interesting backgrounds and could come from outside the municipal world, while others may have current municipal experience and are ready for the next step to become the town's chief administrator.

The committee conducted interviews with candidates on Friday, Feb. 9 and Monday, Feb. 12.

Candidates who were considered strong or very strong fits were reviewed by the screening committee. The Select Board will have the ultimate decision-making authority over the hire of the town's chief administrative officer.

Long-time town manager Jeff Hull retired in October 2023. Lou Cimaglia, the town's veteran's agent, has been holding the ship steady as interim town manager with the support of department heads and administrative staff.

According to screening committee chairperson Rob Peterson, the Select Board was provided an update on the status of the process at its Feb. 12 meeting.

"The Select Board will look to set a time to meet and interview a short list of candidates," Peterson said, adding that he thought that might occur over the next few weeks.

Select Board moves street acceptance forward

By LIZZY HILL
News Correspondent

TEWKSBURY — The Select Board met on Monday, Feb. 12 and approved a number of resident requests.

Their only appointment that night concerned a request to initiate the street acceptance process for Green Meadow Drive. Temporary Town Manager Lou Cimaglia informed the board of their receipt of memorandums from Director of Planning and Conservation Valerie Gingrich and developer Joe Langone.

He shared that the subdivision developer requested the Planning Board review their request and initiate the street acceptance process, which they did. This board's approval would be the next step.

Cimaglia also mentioned that the request would come before the board for a public hearing during their Feb. 26 meeting.

The board voted in favor of following the recommendation of Gingrich and Town Engineer Paul Alunni as described.

Three other memos were received that night. The first was from Cimaglia, notifying the board about the warrant articles by petition which would be put up for vote at the annual Town Meeting. He mentioned articles for rezoning parcels and areas of town, renaming the Woburn Street School as the Richardson Elementary School, and a few others.

Town Manager Screening Committee Chair Robert G. Peterson Jr. wrote the board with an update after their latest executive session. He shared that the committee reviewed all of the applications received for the town manager position. Though he couldn't give too much detail, Peterson said they were satisfied with the number of applicants and the strength of the resumes they received.

They narrowed the applicants down to interviewees and were undertaking interviews in order to present finalists to the board.

Lastly, a letter was received from Commonwealth of Massachusetts Archivist John D. Warner Jr. to Town Clerk Elizabeth Lawrenson regarding a veterans' heritage grant. Cimaglia reminded the board that Lawrenson came before them previously to announce she would apply for the grant. The memo provided that the award came in at $2,037.00.

The board then approved the signing of the warrant to hold the presidential primary election on March 5, 2024. They approved executing the collective bargaining agreement reached between the town and the New England Police

For Wilmington comic collector, non-superhero Golden Age titles hold nostalgia — and value

WILMINGTON — Philip Cole's comic book collection is so famous that it has its own name: the PACole Collection — more than 1,000 graded books that have been admired, and coveted, by fellow collectors for decades.

They'll have a shot at owning some of these prized books when ComicConnect hosts the debut of the PACole Collection as part of its Event Auction 57, starting Feb. 26.

One part of Cole's collection, though, is not likely to bring as much attention as the others. Still, it's "near and dear to my heart," as he puts it: Richie Rich. It's where his love of comic books began as a kid growing up in Dunkirk, New York, a town about an hour south of Buffalo on the shores of Lake Erie.

"In the collection is the first comic I ever bought — Richie Rich," said Cole, 61, who lives in Wilmington, a suburb of Boston. "I was maybe 9 or 10. I remember taking my allowance and paper route money and swinging around every week to the four newsstands in my hometown. They knew me. They would hold the new comics behind the counter until I could get there."

He would also sneak peeks at the comics kept in the attic by his brother, who was 10 years older. One of them was a Golden Age DC title, Sugar and Spike, featuring the misadventures of two toddlers who communicate via "baby talk" with each other and to other infants, but not to adults.

Because the issues were routinely cut up by kids for the included paper dolls, they're incredibly rare now.

"Fast forward to adulthood, and I thought, 'Let me try to put together a collection of 'Sugar and Spike,'" Cole said.

Though not complete, Cole's Sugar and Spike set won an award as Best Golden Age Set from the CGC Comics Registry and will be included in the auction.

As to why he became a collector, Cole said, "I always had that mindset. My father was a stamp collector. It must be genetic. He wanted me to collect stamps, but my older brother had collected comics. I just kept them. Over the years, I have maybe sold only a dozen comics from my collection."

He kept collecting as a teenager and young adult. In high school, he was introduced to the Marvel titles and the idea of collecting graded and encapsulated books. And he had a nose for what might become a hit.

"Just before we were married in 1985, I dragged my wife, Karen, to a comic book show in Boston," Cole recalled. "There was a table with two guys from New Hampshire selling their new comic book. I bought #2 and #4 and had them autograph them to me. I wanted to buy #1 but Karen said, 'No way you're spending $100. Who wants a comic book about teenage mutant ninja turtles?'"

Businesses must electronically file Form 8300, Report of Cash Payments Over $10,000, beginning January 1, 2024

— PART III —

Record keeping: A business must keep a copy of every Form 8300 it files, as well as any supporting documentation and the required statement it sends to customers, for five years from the date filed. Filing electronically will provide confirmation that the form was filed; however, e-file confirmation e-mails alone don't meet the record keeping requirement. When e-filing, filers must also save a copy of the form prior to finalizing the form submission. They should associate the confirmation number with the saved copy. Before finalizing the form for submission, businesses should save a copy of the form electronically or print a copy.

E-filing: Many businesses have already found the free and secure e-filing system to be a more convenient and cost-effective way to meet the reporting deadline of 15 days after a transaction. They get free email acknowledgment of receipt of the form when they e-file. Businesses can batch e-file their reports, which is especially helpful to those required to file many forms.

To file Forms 8300 electronically, a business must set up an account with the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network's BSA E-Filing System. The IRS will ensure the privacy and security of all taxpayer data.

For more information, interested businesses can call the Bank Secrecy Act E-Filing Help Desk at 866-346-9478 or email them at BSAEFilingHelp@finccn.gov. For more information about the BSA E-Filing System, businesses can complete a technical support request at Self Service Help Ticket (treas.gov). The help desk is available Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. EST.

Shop Lifestyle consignment for luxury attire

By PAIGE IMPINK
News Correspondent
paige@yourtowncrier.com

Despite gloomy skies and six more weeks of winter, thoughts of warmer weather and uplifting times are on the minds of many as they plan for formal events in the spring and summer. And dress shopping for weddings, proms, and other formal events, often a group affair, is taking on a more sustainable vibe.

Fueled by the thrifting movement and the awareness by Gen Z of the impact of fast fashion on the environment, shopping consignment for luxury attire is increasingly where it's at.

Consignment today is defined by responsible consumption, and the market is expected to grow according to a 2020 report by thredUp, an online consignment platform. The landscape is dotted with boutiques and specialty upscale shops carrying pre-loved garments that have much more life to give.

Shoppers, many of whom are seeking to help their wallets while also helping the planet, are turning to consignment shops that specialize in bridal and special event formalwear.

Nearby, Consignment Bridal and Prom in North Andover sees customers from the Merrimack Valley, New England, New York and beyond.

"People recognize there is value in seeking out a gently worn wedding dress, mother of the bride dress, and the accessories that go with them," said Maria Seville, a dress consultant at the shop.

Owner Jeanne Bianchi studied fashion design and made custom dresses in Waltham for years. In 2015, Bianchi started the store after hearing friends remark how expensive fancy dresses for proms were. Looking to start a business once her children were grown, Bianchi took the opportunity.

Seville said the market is booming for consignment bridal and prom dresses.

"We have new dresses that were purchased but never worn, and dresses that were worn for a few hours. They are sold at a substantial discount, and everything is current within five years," said Seville.

Brides reserve a 90-minute slot and are given full attention as they peruse the dresses.

"Designers run differ-

▲ New and gently-worn wedding dresses at Consignment Bridal and Prom give brides more fit and style options than a traditional salon. Brides are looking to save their wallets while saving the planet.

ently, so brides will try dresses in different sizes and styles," said Seville, who said the consignment bridal model gives brides much more selection than a traditional retail outlet.

There are also matching shoes, clutches, belts, veils, and jewelry to complement the ensemble. The store partners with a seamstress to get just the right fit. Drop-ins are welcomed for the prom and mother of the bride dresses, but appointments are needed for wedding dress shopping.

Seville has seen it all. "We've had cowboy boots for a rodeo wedding, lots of sneakers for a mountaintop wedding, and sandals for beachside weddings. You name it, today's brides are imagining it," said Seville, who loves hearing the stories and plans.

Similar to the wedding dresses, the prom dress consignment market is increasingly popular.

"We are starting our peak season now," said Seville, who sees customers shopping in February for cotillions, military balls, proms, and other significant events. "We are finding shops from around the country sending us new dresses to consign so they can keep their own inventory fresh."

In fact, 80 percent of their inventory is new. Everything the shop sells is floor length, and the trend seems stable.

"Our customers have an eco-friendly awareness," said Seville.

And while small consignment stores can also be a resource for formal items, the North Andover shop has hundreds of dresses in each category to choose from, and prides itself on a laid back, low stress experience. Sizes for brides and prom dresses range from 00 to size 26.

If a special event is in your future, consider shopping sustainably for your formal attire needs.

◀ Consignment prom dresses are a sustainable way to get just the right look at a fraction of the cost.

Healey-Driscoll Administration announces over $9.1M to strengthen cybersecurity

BRAINTREE — The Healey-Driscoll Administration announced today that more than $9.1 million in federal grant funds will be made available to strengthen cybersecurity and reduce systemic cyber risk for public agencies statewide.

The Municipal Local Cybersecurity Grant Program will invest $7,289,717 into local agencies, including cities and towns, regional school districts and other regional authorities. Single applicants may apply for up to $100,000 in funding, while multiple municipalities may jointly apply for up to $300,000.

State agencies can apply for funding through the State Share Cybersecurity Grant Program. A total of $1,822,429 is being made available, and applicants may request a maximum award of $100,000.

"Cybersecurity threats continue to increase in sophistication and frequency. In this ever-changing digital world, we must implement smart cybersecurity strategies and adapt our systems to meet the moment," said Governor Maura Healey. "These grant programs will provide state and local agencies with resources to effectively respond to and recover from a cyber-incident."

"These programs allow us to meet our security objectives across the state. No one agency can achieve these goals alone; the programs launched today will support state and municipal agencies as they implement new initiatives to create a more secure Massachusetts," said Lt. Governor Kim Driscoll.

The Office of Grants and Research (OGR) and the Executive Office of Public Safety and Security (EOPSS) partnered with the Executive Office of Technology Services and Security (EOTSS) and the MassCyberCenter to make grant funds available to support cybersecurity initiatives across Massachusetts.

The federal funds were awarded through the State and Local Cybersecurity Grant Program, offered by the Department of Homeland Security's Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) and Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). As the State Administrative Agency for grant funds received by Massachusetts from these federal agencies, OGR is responsible for managing and administering the grant.

In accordance with terms of the federal grant award, the Massachusetts Cybersecurity Planning Committee was formed to guide allowable cybersecurity activities for the Commonwealth, its municipalities, and other public entities.

"In every conversation I have with a municipal leader, cybersecurity is a top concern, but they either do not have the dedicated personnel or funding to implement the most impactful best practices. Our state agencies and municipal governments will greatly benefit from this grant program, which strengthens the cybersecurity posture from a whole-of-state approach and makes the services we deliver to residents more secure," said Secretary of Technology Services and Security Jason Snyder, who as the Commonwealth's Chief Information Office chairs the Massachusetts Cybersecurity Planning Committee.

"Massachusetts is a global leader in innovation. Our adoption of advanced technology has vastly improved the Government's ability to deliver more effective and efficient services to our constituents," said Secretary of Public Safety and Security Terrence Reidy. "Those same innovations have also exposed our operational systems and sensitive data to significant risk. I encourage eligible entities to pursue this funding opportunity and strengthen our collective defense against evolving digital threats."

"This cross-secretariat collaboration is key to achieving our cybersecurity goals at the state and local level," said Deputy

Secretary of Public Safety and Security Susan Terrey, the Commonwealth's Homeland Security Advisory and vice-chair of the Massachusetts Cybersecurity Planning Committee. "These grant opportunities reflect our commitment to enhancing cybersecurity, safeguarding infrastructure, building statewide cyber-resiliency and, above all, protecting our communities from harm."

"By securing these grant funds for the Commonwealth, we're able to address some of our most immediate cybersecurity priorities," said OGR Executive Director Kevin Stanton. "These programs allow us to partner with state and municipal leaders to promote enhanced cybersecurity preparedness and responses, helping ensure the security of the Commonwealth and its communities."

Applications for both grant programs are due March 8, 2024.

Interested municipalities and state agencies can learn more about the application process during upcoming webinars offered by OGR. Additional information, webinar registration links and application materials are available by visiting the Municipal Local Cybersecurity Grant Program page and State Share Cybersecurity Grant Program page of OGR's website.

100+ People Tewksbury updates bylaws to refocus on local nonprofits

TEWKSBURY — As Tewksbury's 100+ People Who Care giving circle approaches its three-year anniversary, the board has proposed several bylaw updates that reflect the desire by many members to focus more on Tewksbury-based nonprofits that serve a significant number of residents.

"While we retain a regional focus, we understand that there are a number of local and in-town nonprofits that are experiencing exceptional need," said Chair Brent Conway. "And now that we are entering our third year, group favorites like Into Action Recovery will be eligible to be back on the pickerwheel."

When a nonprofit receives the $10,000 Impact Award, it becomes ineligible for nomination for three years. Beginning in June, members may nominate previous winners including Alternative House, Hidden Battles, and Into Action on a rolling basis.

Under the new bylaw, at least one Tewksbury-based nonprofit will present at each meeting. The group is also looking to partner with local groups to hold one service project per quarter for members, such as stocking the shelves at the Community Pantry. A new community service chair position is being created. Anyone interested in helping with this effort can reach out at 100PeopleTewksbury@gmail.com.

The board is also seeking two sponsors for the March event to donate $250 to two of the featured nonprofits.

In addition, the group is aiming to be greener by eliminating envelopes that end up being thrown away at the end of the night.

"Given that more than half of members have joined the 100+ People Grapevine to donate electronically, the time seems right to streamline the donation process," said board member Tricia Elwell.

Any Tewksbury resident can join the 100+ People either individually or as a team and nominate a nonprofit. The more nominations, the more likely it is a group will be selected to present.

The 100+ People Who Care Tewksbury was founded in 2021 as a way for the community to come together and make significant change through impact giving.

"Since our first event in June 2021, our members have donated more than $130,000 to nonprofits in our region, and more than 50 organizations have been nominated or participated in our meetings, increasing their reach to a broad, active philanthropic community," said at-large board member Jayne Wellman.

The next Impact Giving Night will be Monday, March 18 at 3 Amigos Bar & Grill at 1777 Main St. Social hour begins at 6 p.m., followed by presentations at 7 p.m. The pickerwheel spins to select the three nonprofits that will be featured on Thursday, Feb. 15 at 7 p.m. All members are asked to check their nonprofit selections and contact Lorna Garey to make updates.

Book Stew Review

'Master Slave Husband Wife' by Ilyon Woo

By EILEEN MACDOUGALL

Such an incredible true history, pre-Civil War, of Ellen and William Craft, an enslaved couple who traveled from bondage in Macon, Georgia to Philadelphia and freedom, though not to safety or security.

Ellen, who was "owned" by her own half-sister, had very light skin color and was able to pass as a young white "gentleman," and William as her devoted, enslaved servant.

Through six states, by rail, ferry, coach, staying at inns as owner and owned, they took enormous risks of capture. Due to the hideous Fugitive Slave Act of 1850, agreed to by the North to keep the country together and championed by such statesmen as Noah Webster, the Crafts were always in danger of being returned to Macon.

To achieve their true freedom from capture, the Crafts sailed to Great Britain, where they appeared on the anti-slavery lecture circuit, with Ellen billed as "The White Slave," a description she despised.

All the while, both of their family members remained enslaved in Georgia until the Emancipation Proclamation.

In addition to the incredible story of their journey, the author shares her extensive research on the Boston abolitionists, on other Black men and women who were able to escape slavery, and on the ultimate destinies of the Crafts and their supporters.

Most repulsive was the horrifying episode with the "slavecatchers" sent from down South to Boston, where the Crafts were protected by activists and reviled by pro-slavery citizens who tried to force their return to the Macon plantation.

This is a remarkable recounting of little-known history, brought brilliantly back into the light by a talented author.

Safety tips for using a portable generator

By HEATHER BURNS
News Correspondent

Despite the fact that the first day of spring is a little over a month away, and the meteorological first day of spring is just a few weeks away, the seasoned New Englander recognizes that we are likely in store for several more winter storms before we can enjoy any upcoming spring-like weather.

Winter storms can not only bring cold temperatures and unwanted snow and ice, but these storms can also cause area wide power outages.

Because of the severity of New England storms, many are choosing to get generators to avoid the inconvenience of long- and short-term power outages.

While whole-house or fixed generators provide an automatic, permanent backup power solution supplied by natural gas or liquid propane, they are a large financial investment, and can be too costly for some homeowners.

Portable generators are powered by gasoline, and can be a more affordable option for a temporary backup power solution. Although not powerful enough to supply your entire house with electricity, they can help you through a power outage by keeping your refrigerator and heat running, as well as providing a few lights and the ability to charge your phone or laptop.

For those who currently own, or are considering purchasing a portable generator, be aware that although portable generators can be extremely helpful during a power outage, there are several safety measures to be addressed when using a portable generator.

Carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning is a colorless, odorless toxic gas that can be a real concern when improperly running a portable generator.

According to the National Institutes of Health, CO exposure can cause death in as little as five minutes, and this danger can be apparent when a running portable generator is not properly ventilated.

Never use a generator indoors or in enclosed spaces such as a garage, shed, crawlspace or basement. This applies even if windows and doors are left open, as CO can still build up in enclosed spaces.

Make sure your generator has a three to four foot clearance on all sides to assure adequate ventilation.

Portable generators should be kept 20 feet away from your house, avoiding placement near doors, windows and vents of your home. Always direct the exhaust from the generator away from your home.

When purchasing a portable generator, look for one with an integrated CO safety shut off to help avoid CO build up and potential poisoning.

According to OSHA (Occupational Safety and Health Administration) there are also several safety precautions you should take to avoid a fire hazard.

Be aware that generators become hot when running and remain hot for a period of time after running. Generator fuels such as gasoline or kerosene can ignite when spilled on hot engine parts, so before refueling, shut down the generator and allow it to cool.

When keeping extra fuel on hand for your generator, store fuel in fuel-approved containers in a cool, ventilated area. Do not store inside your home or near any potential source of heat or flames.

Keep in mind the electricity created by a portable generator not only has the same hazards as normal utility supplied electricity, but it also has additional hazards because a generator often bypasses safety devices (such as circuit breakers) that are built into an electrical system.

Plugging electrical appliances directly into the generator using the manufactured supplied cord is preferred, however, you will most likely need the aid of an extension cord.

When using extension cords, always use appropriately rated, three pronged, outdoor extension cords.

The three pronged cord plugs with built-in GFCI protection are critical to protect against shock if water collects in or near the equipment.

Inspect cords regularly for any cuts, damage or fraying, replacing damaged cords as needed.

To avoid the use of extension cords, you may want to consider having a transfer switch professionally installed. This will allow your generator to be connected to your circuit panel to power hardwired appliances, and can also help avoid overload issues, as an overloaded generator can overheat and cause a fire.

Never try to connect your generator directly to your home without the experience of a qualified electrician. Improper installation can cause backfeeding, which can present electrocution risk to you as well as utility workers and neighbors served on the same transformer.

Backfeeding can also damage or start a fire in your electronic devices and appliances.

Another important safety check is to make sure your generator is properly grounded and the grounding connections are tight. Consult your manufacturer's instructions for proper grounding methods.

The chances are you will most likely need the aid of a generator during inclement weather, however, never run your portable generator in the direct flow of rain or while the unit is partially submerged in water.

Canopies or tents specifically made for generators to shield rain while allowing proper ventilation can be purchased online or at home improvement and hardware stores. Most are reasonably priced, and are definitely a smart investment for those wanting to run a generator during a storm.

If your portable generator is left out in the rain or in a puddle, make sure all equipment is thoroughly dried and inspected before using.

As with all power engine equipment, keep children and pets safely away from your running portable generator.

For more resources for information on generator safety and carbon monoxide safety visit www.fema.gov/fact-sheet/use-generators-safely-home.

Cole ready to move on from comic book collection

When their three children had finished college and tuition was in their rear-view mirror, Cole decided to take a more strategic approach to collecting as an investment. Over the years, he built up a collection that has Vincent Zurzolo, president of ComicConnect, very excited.

"This collection encompasses incredibly rare Golden Age titles, runs of classic pre-Code horror titles and nearly every early Marvel key issue," Zurzolo says. "The CGC Registry lists over 7,000 collections, and the PACole Collection is ranked #90."

Marvel superheroes are well represented, with first appearances of Spider-Man, Fantastic Four, Incredible Hulk and X-Men. There's a rare run of early issues of Detective Comics (DC) featuring some of Batman's early adventures, along with some from the late-'30s, pre-Batman.

"These rarely come up for sale," Zurzolo said.

Other classic Golden Age titles include so-called "good girl"-style comics, featuring scantily clad young heroines in provocative situations — one reason people began fretting about the negative impact of comics on impressionable children and the Comics Code Authority came into existence in 1954. The Cole collection features a complete run of one such superheroine, Phantom Lady.

Cole considers his copy of Amazing Fantasy #15, the first appearance of Spider-Man, one of the gems of his collection.

"They are not necessarily rare, but everyone wants one," he said.

Also part of his collection: Mad #1-#10, from before it became Mad Magazine. But he's particularly proud of his collection of EC (Entertainment Comics), which "I looked longingly at as a child," Cole said.

In the 1950s, EC began publishing horror, science fiction, military fiction and satire under the leadership of William Gaines, later of Mad Magazine fame.

"Gaines kept back 12 of every book EC published between 1950 and 1955 in mint condition, and he sold them off in the early '90s," Cole noted. "I have 19 Gaines file copies, one autographed by one of the famous artists, Al Feldstein, who died in 2014."

All of which begs the question: Why sell at all, and why now? Short answer: Life.

Cole explains that he and his siblings spent a tough year clearing out his mother's house in Dunkirk, where she lived her whole life, after she died at 92.

"Karen and I pledged that we were not going to make our children do that," he said.

He also stepped away from a demanding career leading software engineering for the defense contractor Raytheon after its merger with United Technologies.

"They wanted me to stay on, but I took early retirement," he said.

Now that he has the time, he wants to make sure there's money to do what he and Karen want to do. Having decided to, as he put it, "rip the Band-Aid off" and sell his entire collection, he reached out to several auction/consignment houses and selected ComicConnect because of its size, customer service and reputation in the industry.

Cole kept just one graded item: Archie #136 (1963), because the cover ties in with his martial arts training. A third-degree black belt in karate, he teaches at the Academy of Traditional Karate in Wilmington.

He admits to feeling a little wistful watching 70 boxes of comic book collecting history loaded into a truck and driven down to New York City.

"But nobody else in my family is a collector," he added. "It was just time."

Rep from MBTA invited to next meeting

Benevolent Association, Local 1. Patrolmen's Union for the period between July 1, 2022 and June 30, 2024.

Requests were also sent in by Jr. WOW Club Co-President Michael Dynan to use the town common for an easter egg hunt on March 30 and Recreation Director Brett Sawin to use the town common and gazebo for the summer concert series on July 10, July 17, July 24, and July 31. Both were approved.

Under new business, Select Board Member Frank West asked about the possibility to gather a list of their previous meeting minutes still being worked on and a date when they may be provided to the board. Chair Gary DePalma said he would discuss this request with Cimaglia and get back to them.

DePalma also shared with the board that he'd like to invite a representative from the MBTA to a future meeting for an update on the North Wilmington train platform. He commented that nothing had been done on the platform yet, and he wanted to find out what was going on.

West also mentioned that he'd reached out to the MBTA Advisory Committee Chair for the same thing but hadn't heard back.

Kevin Cairra wondered if the town's legislative delegation could provide information in this regard, reminding them that Senator Bruce Tarr was the one who procured a $1 million grant for the building of the new platform.

The Salute to Service that night went out to Robert Ciaccio for his service in the US Marine Corps where he earned the Global War on Terrorism medal, the Marksmanship Pistol Qualification Badge, and other recognitions. Greg Bendel also added that Ciaccio now served as a member of the town's Public Buildings Department.

DePalma reminded residents that the following day there would be no school, no trash collection, and that the town hall would be closed due to expected snow.

The board will next meet on Monday, Feb. 26.

Com. looking for 'right person' for job

Screening committee member and town finance director/town accountant Bryan Perry departed the employ of the town earlier in the month. Perry had been considered early on as a possible candidate for the interim town manager position. At this point in the process, Peterson did not think that Perry's departure would impact the procedural work of the committee.

The search process, which began in the fall, is expected to progress to selection, reference check, offer and installation of a new town manager by early spring. Peterson said the committee did not want to rush the process and wants to find the "right person" for the job.

Reading ready to begin enforcement of new styrofoam ban

By PATRICK BLAIS

The Town of Reading will lead the way later this month in becoming the first community in the Middlesex East's coverage area to forbid restaurateurs, caterers, and non-profit entities from packaging up food and takeout orders in styrofoam and other light plastic containers.

Last week, Reading Director of Operations Jayne Wellman in a prepared statement revealed that Reading's health department will officially begin enforcing a new polystyrene ban on Feb. 22. Over the coming weeks, municipal leaders hope to spread the word about the specifics around the bylaw to ensure all small business owners are educated about the rules.

"The ban on disposable polystyrene food service items affects a variety of different businesses and organizations in town that provide food," Wellman advised the general public. "The bylaw applies to disposable food service items for dining, takeout, or delivery at:

- Restaurants, mobile food vendors, and caterers;
- Public and private schools;

- Farmers markets;
- Civic or religious centers or facilities;
- Any building owned by the Town of Reading;
- [and] any establishment with a permit to operate under the State Food Code."

According to the Massachusetts' Sierra Club, Reading is one of 61 communities across the state to have enacted either a full or partial ban on the use of polystyrene products. Though styrofoam can technically be recycled, doing so is considered cost-prohibitive - especially since the plastics are commonly mixed with food waste.

Nearby municipalities that have previously passed such measures include Melrose and Andover. State legislators in Maine, New York and Vermont have similarly enacted statewide bans on styrofoam products, which besides not being biodegradable, commonly break down into smaller fragments and toxic micro-plastics that can persist in the environment for just about forever. Critics of polystyrene plastics also say such products, after fragmenting, regularly poison or block the digestive systems of birds and other wildlife that mistake those pieces of trash for food.

The environmental harms caused by polystyrene waste, includes the traditional foam and its rigid "Plastic Number 6" counterpart, was listed by ban supporters in Reading as one of the primary reasons for the use prohibitions. Reading's Climate Advisory Committee, which brought the proposed bylaw before Town Meeting back in November of 2022, also cited various scientific studies which suggested the plastic can release toxic chemicals after coming into contact with heat or fatty acids.

"There are a bunch of plastics used in food establishments, but polystyrene is the problem," Climate Advisory Committee Chair David Seek stated during the 2022 debate over the Town Meeting measure. "So what's the problem with polystyrene? Well

Review: 'Bob Marley: One Love', noble but uninspiring

By JAKE COYLE
AP Film Writer

Bob Marley was born in 1945, the son of an 18-year-old mother and a much older white man who had nothing to do with his son. As a boy raised in poverty, he often slept on the cold ground. Five years after moving to Kingston's Trench Town, he made his first record, at 17. Not 20 years later, he was dead.

By then, Marley had become the face of not just reggae, Rastafarianism and Jamaica, but of revolution, resistance and peace. He left behind a body of work that has only grown more monumental with time. "Redemption Song." "No Woman No Cry." "War." "Trench Town Rock." "Get Up Stand Up." "Lively Up Yourself." "One Love People Get Ready." The Beatles could argue they were bigger than Jesus but no one thought - like some did Marley - that they were actually the Second Coming.

So, yeah, it's a lot for a movie - any movie. "Bob Marley: One Love," directed by Reinaldo Marcus Green, is a noble but uninspired attempt to capture some of the essence of Marley. Its lived-in textures and attention to Marley's political consciousness, just by themselves, are enough to make "One Love" something more substantial than many recent, glossier music biopics.

But the power and complexity of Marley is still out of reach for "One Love," which takes a typical biopic framework in plotting itself around the run-up to an important concert with flashbacks mixed in. When footage of the real Marley inevitably plays over the credits, it's a painful comparison to the ruminative but inert movie that played before it.

The first thing you notice about the performance by Ben Kingsley-Adir, the talented British actor of "One Night in Miami..." and "Barbie," is that he's got the voice. His Marley has the growl and lilt of the singer's resonant Jamaican accent. But what the performance is missing — an absence so clear when the real Marley turns up — is the physical dynamism and charismatic velocity of Marley.

The performance that bookends the film is the One Love Peace Concert, which was put on in Jamaica in 1978 as a way to heal the divided, violent country. Marley, during "Jammin'," brought the rival party leaders Edward Seaga and Michael Manley on stage.

The turmoil in Jamaica weighs heavily on Marley throughout film; images of fields aflame run repeatedly as a reflection of his memories. Though largely set in Europe, the real through line of the film is Marley as consumed with the plight of his countrymen, and others in similar situations around the world. When white executives push back against touring in Africa due to its lack of infrastructure, he replies, "So we build it." How all of this percolates in Marley and gets filtered into the music is, ultimately, what "One Love" is about.

"The music and the message are the same thing," Marley explains.

"Bob Marley: One Love," a Paramount Pictures release is rated PG13 by the Motion Picture Association for marijuana use and smoking throughout, some violence and brief strong language. Running time: 107 minutes. Two stars out of four.

first, it's based off of [the chemical] styrene, which is a neurotoxin and a probable carcinogen."

"It harms wildlife, particularly the foam form that crumbles so easily. Polystyrene is also not biodegradable," Zeek added. "It's also almost never recycled due to its low value."

Reading has waited for almost a year to begin enforcing the new bylaw so that local food establishments had time to exhaust their current styrofoam product inventory and negotiate with vendors for a new compliant supply of take-out containers.

The new bylaw will be enforced by Reading's health director and will not apply to purchases made by town residents for use in their private domiciles. Likewise, the ban does not apply to food items that are prepackaged outside of Reading proper for sale in grocery stores and other retail establishments.

"The bylaw does not apply to private use of disposable polystyrene food service items. There is no restriction on the sale of these items to individuals," assured Wellman and local health department staffers in last week's public advisory.

Town officials say initial enforcement activity around the polystyrene ban will be somewhat lax, as the health department first wants to spread public awareness about the bylaw.

Per the town regulations, first time offenders will be issued a warning for first-time offenses, while the health director will retain the right to issue fines of $50 for second offenses. Third-time and subsequent violations can carry a fine of up to $200.

According to the Town of Reading's website, Reading's health director can also grant local businesses hardship waivers of up to six-months should a local merchant or non-profit organization be able to demonstrate that compliance with the regulations would create a severe economic hardship.

"The Town of Reading will work with affected establishments for a smooth transition through the dissemination of educational materials which highlight best practices and suggestions for compliance under this new bylaw," Wellman stated last week.

While the partial polystyrene ban passed by an overwhelming 128-to-8 Town Meeting majority, advocacy groups like the Reading Chamber of Commerce convinced town officials to delay implementation of the new bylaw for at least a year.

At the time, Chamber officials, joined by Reading Select Board members Chris Haley and Carlo Bacci, pointed out that a number of small businesses were still recovering from the financial pressures brought about by the COVID-19 pandemic and the state's emergency responses to the public health crisis.

According to Bacci, a one-time restaurant owner whose family operates a chocolate manufacturing plant in Swampscott, the delayed implementation would also give restaurant owners time to find complaint takeout containers, coffee cups, and disposal utensils.

"We're dealing with a supply chain nightmare with no end in sight. Costs continue to rise on a yearly, monthly and daily basis. Items are out of stock. Items are back-ordered. Items are being discontinued," Bacci argued during the Town Meeting debate over the bylaw.

Letter to the Editor

Thank you from The Salvation Army

Dear Editor,

It is with the most heartfelt gratitude that The Salvation Army of Massachusetts thanks all those who contributed to the 2023 Red Kettle Campaign. Throughout the holidays your donations, regardless of size, contributed to aiding so many families throughout Massachusetts. The Salvation Army of Massachusetts raised more than $2 million to help families and those in need with food, clothing, housing assistance and more this holiday season.

That speaks volumes about the extraordinary generosity of spirit found across the Commonwealth, which has made so many lives a little bit easier.

However, many families are still struggling and unable to meet the most basic needs. Inflation, housing costs, and day-to-day challenges continue to take their toll. Salvation Army programming, funded by generous donations, provides rent and utility assistance, food, and creates pathways out of poverty.

The Salvation Army of Massachusetts is committed to meeting those needs in 2024. Each of the 29 Corps Community Centers and more than 220 Service Extension Units across the state strive to aid as many people as possible, and they need your continued support to do so. With the generosity of your donations, 2024 could be The Salvation Army's best year ever.

We look forward to continuing to do the most good. Most importantly, we hope you all stay safe, happy and healthy this year.

TPD welcomes new co-response clinician Amanda Grant to Tewksbury TEWKSBURY — Chief Ryan Columbus is pleased to announce that the Tewksbury Police Department is welcoming a new co-response mental health clinician to the Behavioral Health Unit Police Collaborative. Amanda Grant grew up in West Roxbury. She has a Bachelor's degree in Psychology from UMass Boston and a Master's degree in Psychology from William James College. Grant succeeds a co-response clinician who recently left the unit.

Grant will respond alongside Tewksbury police to mental health emergencies and crises as part of the Behavioral Health Unit Police Collaborative, and will work with individuals after crises to ensure they have access to appropriate services.

"I have family members in the policing profession, so the opportunity to collaborate with dedicated and hard-working law enforcement professionals is a privilege which I am very excited about," Grant said.

The collaborative, funded by a grant from the Department of Mental Health, provides member departments with access to a co-response clinician who can respond to active calls for service, follow up with individuals post-crisis, and make referrals to community-based services.

Fully embedded into each department, the program provides a trauma-informed, highly trained co-response clinician for individuals experiencing a mental health or substance use crisis. Grant will work primarily with Tewksbury Police.

Since 2016, the Billerica, Chelmsford, Dracut, Tewksbury, and Tyngsborough Police Departments have worked to create a regional mental health collaborative aimed at diverting individuals with mental health and substance misuse disorders from being unnecessarily processed through the criminal justice system or through already overcrowded emergency rooms.

In addition to on-scene responses, clinicians are:

- Accessible to police 24/7 for mental health consultation
- Available to community members for follow-up with police
- Available for follow-up with individuals post-crisis
- Able to make referrals for community-based services, such as for non-acute levels of care and case management

Supporting community initiatives for better health, wellness, and mental health

Girls hockey returns to the win column

In recent weeks, the regular season schedule has been rather unkind to the Stoneham-Wilmington High girls ice hockey team, as the girls suffered consecutive defeats, at the hands of three first-rate clubs, including the state's overall best program.

Over a span of seven days, Stoneham-Wilmington fell 3-0 to Belmont, 4-2 to Burlington, and lastly, 5-0 to St. Mary's, which is currently No. 1 in the MIAA D1 Power Rankings.

It was a punishing stretch of hockey but SW finally caught a breather last Saturday evening when the struggling, two-win Wakefield Warriors paid a visit to the Stoneham Arena.

On the strength of four goals from Lily MacKenzie, the team's scoring leader by far with 33-goals and 5-assists, Stoneham-Wilmington captured a convincing 5-1 win.

SW improved to 9-8-1 overall and is ranked 18th of 41 teams in the D2 Power Rankings.

"We certainly want the Power Rankings to be in our favor at this stage of the season," said Stoneham-Wilmington coach John LaPiana. "All week long, during practice, we talked about the fact that we have three games left and six points would go a long way."

Answering the call early and often was MacKenzie, putting her team in front just 1:25 into the contest.

Skating on the power play, the senior co-captain worked the puck behind the net, wheeled to the front, and beat Wakefield netminder Julia Welch, stick side.

Promising freshman blueliner Emma Ebert provided the assist.

The Warriors refused to go quietly, however. Rory McNeill buried the equalizer, also on the power play, near the end of the first period. McNeill, along with Sarah Aborn, both underclassmen, are highly talented and the future of this Wakefield program.

"They play better than their record shows," said LaPiana, who defeated Wakefield 6-3 in the first meeting a month ago.

"They have a number of skilled players. If we had come out on an off night, this game could have gone either way."

Near the conclusion of the first period, MacKenzie restored the SW lead, from Ebert and linemate Paige Fuller. On a classic give-and-go, MacKenzie drew Welch out of the net and deftly tucked the puck behind her.

"Lily is a powerful skater and strong with the puck," said LaPiana. "She creates a great deal of her offense curling off the wall and finding lanes. When there is no lane, she has the means to create one for herself. It warms my soul to see her scoring. It makes her happy and in turn, makes the team happy. She's a special hockey player."

MacKenzie made it a natural hat trick with her second period insurance goal, from junior Vivien Savole.

"I have a lot of confidence in my skills but it also helps to have a supportive team behind me," said MacKenzie. "That includes players like Paige Fuller, who has provided many of the assists for my goals. Our final three are league games, so we definitely want to win out."

Midway through the third period, Stoneham-Wilmington solidified the lead on a tally from freshman Dani Chillemi, her second of the season. Assisted by none other than MacKenzie, Chillemi was the third in a rapid sequence of shots off rebounds.

The Warriors, with only six shots through the first two periods of hockey, mustered 10 in the third. Stoneham-Wilmington goaltender Maddie Sainato was forced to wake from her slumber and hold the fort against this renewed effort.

"I'm not going to lie but I was getting a little cold early in the game," said the premier senior goalie. "When the puck is in the offensive zone, I stay warm by doing subtle movements like shifting from side-to-side in the net and trying to do everything I can to stay prepared. We knew this game was very important, especially as the season comes to a close. We want to be on a winning streak heading into the postseason."

With minutes left in the game, MacKenzie put it away with her fourth of the night, from Savole and Fuller.

"I prefer to play teams that we're more suitably matched against," said LaPiana. "If we play well, we can compete and if we don't play well, we get what we deserve. This is the time we need to sharpen our sticks and get ready for the tournament, which is just around the corner."

Stoneham-Wilmington will travel to face 3-10-1 Melrose in a season rematch on Saturday, February 17 at noon.

Girls basketball qualifies for tourney

WHS tops Melrose and Burlington in recent action

By JASON COOKE

sports@yourtowncrier.com

This time last year, the Wilmington High School girls basketball team was limping to the finish line amidst a 6-14 season.

While the postseason was once a goal for then first-year coach Chris Frissore, the 'Cats hit a skid down the stretch of the season, landing at No. 38 in the Div. 2 field and out of playoff contention.

A year later, the Wildcats have flipped the script — riding a four-game win streak to a 10-8 record with two games left on the season slate.

"It's been good," said WHS coach Chris Frissore. "It was nice to get the 10th win, and we're officially in the tournament. It was just a good week, we played well."

Eva Boudreau set the tone for what would come in a 2-0 week for the 'Cats, exploding for 16 first-quarter points in the team's dominant 66-47 win over Melrose. Boudreau finished the game with 27 points on 11 for 17 shooting from the field.

"That is a great basketball game," said Frissore. "If you score 27 points on 11 of 17 shooting, that's how you play basketball. Making the right decisions, making the right reads, and because she's making the right decisions when she drives to the hoop where she's dumping it off or kicking it out, later in the game, it opens things up for her, and she starts to be able to attack, and it's not as congested in the middle. She's letting the game come to her."

Leading just 33-26 at half, Boudreau quarterbacked an offensive takeover in the second half, with the help of Alle Delgenio (13 points), Jill Collins (10 points), and Leah Murphy (5 points).

Although the 'Cats couldn't carry over that momentum into the beginning of their clash with Burlington on Friday, Wilmington locked in when it mattered, escaping with a 47-39 triumph. Boudreau (22 points) and Delgenio (17 points) wouldn't take no for an answer in the second half.

"When it came down to it, they buckled down and played really well," said Frissore. "At the end of the third quarter, we were only up four. Allie and Eva really stepped up and did what they had to do in the second half. They scored all but three points in the second half. When push come to shove, you rely on your vets, and they got it done."

But the win didn't only transpire on the offensive end. Wilmington has embodied a defense-first mindset this winter, and everyone is doing their job. It's one of the main reasons Frissore can point to on how his group was able to right the ship in just one calendar year.

"Jill and Erin (McCarthy) are our anchors on defense," said the coach. "They cover the two best players, and Allie is very good at helping and doubling, so if Erin or Jill are playing great defense, Allie can come over and get a steal. The way the roles are set up this year is what makes a difference. Everyone knows their roles, and they are playing them really well."

The 'Cats close out the regular season this week with matchups against Wakefield (Tuesday) and Tyngsborough (Thursday).

Practice how you play, play how you practice.

It's preached across every high school hockey locker room as a recipe for success. If you work hard in practice, those results will translate into game action — but it's not as simple as it sounds, and sometimes it comes down to every last detail.

Wednesday night's Middlesex League showdown between Wilmington and Stoneham is a prime example of how that mindset impacts winning when it matters the most.

When Wilmington was down 2-1 to Stoneham entering the third period, it wasn't X's and O's that would spark a comeback. Instead, it was all about an intangible will to win — something the Wildcats have embodied on the practice sheet all season long.

"In practice, we talk about finishing the drill and finishing each drill hard," said WHS assistant coach Mark DiGiovanni. "The emphasis was to finish the game and take that practice mentality of working hard through the end of practice."

The third period was the end of the drill for Wilmington at Breakaway Ice Center, and they had undoubtedly finished it. The 'Cats netted four unanswered goals from four different scorers to stun Stoneham and escape with a 5-2 victory. The win snapped a five-game winless streak and avenged an earlier season draw to the Spartans.

"We went from playing our worst game of the year to our best game of the year," said DiGiovanni.

Wilmington came out flying out of the gate, breaking the ice at the 13:15 mark of the opening frame when Ryan Archer scored his first career varsity goal on a rebound from Colin Allard. Allard, a speedy defenseman, stickhandled through a pair of Stoneham defenders while heading up ice, eventually cutting to the net along the right faceoff dot and backhanding a shot on net. Archer cleaned up the rebound, providing the 'Cats with an early 1-0 lead.

Roughly seven minutes later, Stoneham began to respond to Wilmington's pace of play.

Joe Aronis one-timed a pass from below the goal line from Dylan Krasco to pot the equalizer, beating Wilmington's Tyler Marinho five-hole. The netminder totaled 20 saves in the win, making a handful of important stops in the first period to give his team a lift.

Stoneham ultimately carried that energy into the middle frame, scoring the period's lone goal at the 11:15 mark when Ryan Minogue whacked in a rebound in front of the net.

The Spartans controlled most of the period, forcing Wilmington to the outside in their defensive end. Wilmington's first shot on goal of the period came over three minutes into action, a breakaway attempt from Matt O'Brien that Stoneham's Noah Dinan denied. Despite a scoring opportunity from Bobby Cyr on the power play in the final minutes of the period, Wilmington entered the locker room struggling to find any offense in a 2-1 game.

"Going into the third, we just said if we kept up that pace and kept on working at them, eventually we'd start to score," said DiGiovanni. "The team was really energized tonight and fired up."

That's exactly what Wilmington did, breaking through at the 11:28 mark on a Daniel Lagunilla goal to knot the game at two. The 'Cats proceeded to push the pace until they lit the lamp two times in just eight seconds to take a commanding two-goal lead with nine minutes remaining in regulation. After a power play goal from O'Brien gave the 'Cats a lead, Joey Malvone followed it up with a beaming wrist shot for some insurance.

Marinho steered away seven shots in the period, including a flurry of chances on a power play and empty-net attempt in the final minutes. Archer eliminated the threat, icing the game with an empty-net heave to seal the victory.

"Those are special teams things that we do work on all the time, and the kids executed that really well," DiGiovanni said of staying composed down the stretch.

"It just goes to show you if you really focus on the specifics, work hard, and keep that momentum, that even if you're down early in the game and keep on working through it to the end, you can pull it out," he continued. "We'll build on the momentum."

CATS REBOUND WITH BIG WIN OVER BILLERICA

After a 3-1 letdown to Watertown on Saturday afternoon, the 'Cats certainly did build on that momentum in what may very well be their biggest win of the season; Wilmington prevailed 3-0 against D2 power Billerica

Boys hockey tops Stoneham, Billerica at Hallenborg Arena on Monday night.

"We played a complete game from start to finish (and) we got a goal in each period," said WHS head coach Steve Scanlon. "It was a good solid win."

The Wildcats rallied in front of a Marinho shutout, scoring in each frame to stun Billerica on their home ice. AJ Chisholm scored his first varsity goal as Eric Spinney and Allard rounded out the scoring. In Wilmington's last four games, they've produced five first-time goal scorers, as Spinney tucked his first goal in Saturday's loss.

"Secondary scoring is important," said Scanlon. "You can't go into tournaments where they can shut down one line and no one else can score. So it's a bonus to be getting help from different places."

The 'Cats match up this week against Melrose (Wednesday) and Burlington (Saturday) before their final game of the regular season with Tewksbury (Monday).

Numbers can be deceiving.

The Wilmington High boys basketball team's 3-13 record this winter is similar to last season's 3-17 showing, but Wilmington's improvements are written between the lines.

"Obviously the record isn't what we wanted, but anyone who's been to our games has seen how much improvement we've made as a team," said WHS coach Jon Amico.

"We've had a handful of games where we'd lost by 10 or less to teams that were beating us by 30 or 40 last year. That in itself is an improvement. Outside of Reading and Melrose, we've hung with everyone for all four quarters."

That's exactly what happened in Friday's 59-52 loss to Burlington. The Wildcats settled in after the Red Devils pounced on a 12-2 run to start the game. They ultimately couldn't get past a 12-point deficit heading into the fourth, cutting the lead down as little as five.

After a 17-point loss to Burlington earlier in the season, the 'Cats nearly found the win column.

"Our defense improved a little bit," said Amico. "Coach Tim Kelly had a great defensive plan that worked to slow them down."

Michael Oatis recorded his first double-double in the loss, notching 19 points and 10 rebounds.

"He's improved so much, offensively and defensively," said Amico. "He's really turning into a great leader. He does everything we ask of him."

Tiago Gomez (14 points) and Ayden Balter (10 points) rounded the offense. Oatis's outbreak on Friday was just the aftermath of another career performance on Tuesday, where the senior dropped a career-best 20 points in a 63-41 defeat to Melrose.

After Melrose put up a whopping 30 points in the first quarter, a 21-point deficit was too large to chase the rest of the way despite winning all three subsequent quarters.

Ryan Gray also had a big game for the 'Cats, posting nine points and 11 rebounds.

As the season winds down, Amico points to not capitalizing on a potential winning streak as a notable shortcoming to where the team is now. The team will look to chase a streak to cap off the year with matchups with Wakefield (Tuesday) and Saugus (Thursday) this week.

"Ideally, it would be to stack a couple in a row and then have the kids realize that they're capable of winning games," said Amico. "I was really hoping that was going to happen after that big Wakefield win. We had Stoneham and Watertown that next week, two good teams that play everybody hard. It would have been nice to get three (wins) that week, then we would have been rolling with three in a row."
